This is the first foundations text to focus specifically on the sub-specialty area of forensic vocational rehabilitation. Forensic vocational rehabilitation consultants evaluate the vocational and rehabilitation needs of individuals in an array of legal settings such as civil litigation, workers' compensation, social security, and others. The text is unique in its exploration of the vocational rehabilitation process from a bio-psychosocial perspective that views disability as a complex and multidimensional construct. The book comprehensively describes the parameters and theoretical issues of relevance in evaluating and developing opinions in forensically oriented matters.

The text culls and synthesizes current peer-reviewed literature and research on this private subspecialty area of rehabilitation counseling, including theories, models, methods, procedures, and fundamental tenets of the field. Also included is current information concerning the labor market, life care planning, and professional identity, standards, and ethics related to forensic vocational rehabilitation practice.
